— with scenes from the play —

Richard Brinsley Sheridan's wild comedy of 1779 is about the confusion every person has now! Eli Siegel, founder of Aesthetic Realism, explained:

"Two things are present which are ever so hard to manage: the fact that we can reason and have control; also that we are furious cauldrons, molten and bubbling. We are symmetry and unrestraint. And Sheridan, like other writers, other human forces, is a study in fury and symmetry."
